'Plumbers' Said To Tie'71 Leaks To U.S. Military

By Seymour M. Hersh

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (NYT).—The White House investigative unit known as the 'plumbers' uncovered evidence in late 1971 that a "ring" of military officers was relaying highly classified information on the China talks and other matters to officials in the Pentagon, wellinformed sources report.

Some of the officers were assigned to the National Security Council. The secret inquiry, headed by David R. Young jr., then a co-director of the "plumbers," was said to have determined that at least two military officers had participated in apparently illegal activities—including the ransacking of classified files and the unauthorized photocopying of documents—in an apparent attempt to keep high Pentagon officials up-to-date on White House negotiations.

Although no charges were filed formally, the sources added, as many as six military men were reassigned after the investigation. Sources said that Mr. Young's inquiry initially was begun in common to the December, 1971, publication of secret National country Council documents on the India-Pakistan war by Jack inderson, the columnist, but quickly spread into a broad investition of possible widespread military spying.

It was this investigation, reliable sources said, that has been reatedly cited by President Nixon as the "national security" that that the legislation the tter that justified his initial attempt last spring to limit the tice Department's investigation of the Watergate break-in.

The sources said that Mr. Young and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who also heads the National Security Council, both pected then that reports on the White House's highly secret egotiations with China, North Vietnam and the Soviet Union ere being leaked to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and dm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Steff.

Details of the negotiations were officially limited to a few offis in the White House and the National Security Council staff. The investigation, which lasted until early 1972, sources said, was early conducted by Mr. Young. The other three members of the mbers"-Egil Krogh fr., G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt jr. rayed little or no roles in the inquiry.

Il sources interviewed by The Times agreed that Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Young's belief that Pentagon officials were anxious to ob--by covert methods if necessary—details of the White House's fareaching secret deliberations with nations nominally considered America's enemies by military men.

"Laird had a definite feeling that he was being cut off from a lot of stuff and I know it's true," a former Kissinger aide said.

The highest ranking officer reassigned, sources said, was Rear Adm. Robert O. Welander, who was then serving as the liaison hetween the Joints Chiefs of Staff and the National Security

Neither Adm. Welander nor Mr. Laird could be reached today, Adm. Moorer denounced the allegation that he had received rigies information through indirect charmels as "ludicrous. c [A White House statement issued today in San Clemente, Calif., iters reported, disclosed that a government official was found to (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Havana Again Bars U.S. Links Until Blockade Is Abandoned

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 11 (UPI). -The Cuban government said again yesterday that the United States would have to lift its economic blockade of Cuba before any "official exchanges" could take place between Havana and Washington.

The statement, released in Havana and issued by the Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina, in Mexico City, mentioned no other conditions for the beginning of talks with the United States. The two countries broke off diplomatic relations in January, 1961. The Foreign Ministry made the statement because of what it called "capricious interpretations of a similar statement that was made here Monday night by the Cuban Ambassador to Mexico,

U.S. to Target Soviet Military Bases By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (WP). -Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said yesterday that he wants to improve the accuracy of long-range missiles and aim some existing missiles at Soviet military targets instead of aiming all of them at cities and industrial The intent, as officials explained it, is to give the President more flexibility to respond in kind to a small or limited nuclear attack in the hope that an all-out nuclear war could be quickly discouraged. The defense secretary, in a question-and-answer session with newsmen at a luncheon here, drew a distinction between the retargeting of existing missiles as part of a change in strategy and the nuclear-arsenal expansion that is contemplated unless further agreements are reached at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks. The administration argument leading to the retargeting is this: Missile forces on both sides are

If the United States could respond () either type of attack only by bitting Soviet cities IIS cities would certainly be blasted in a second Soviet volley. Thus, as Mr. Schlesinger explained yesterday, "there has taken place a change in the strategies of the United States with regard to the hypothetical deployment of the central stralegic forces... A change in target strategy. Our position," with respect to hitting cities first, "is that this not be the only or even the principal option for command authorities."

It was learned that, aside from four new Soviet land-based ICBMs being developed—though not yet deployed — and a new Delta class of missile-firing submarines, the Russians have started building a still larger class of missile subs which apparently will carry more than the Delta's load of 12 missiles.

Mr. Schlesinger's remarks reflect major prospective changes in U.S. nuclear strategy. He was met at the airport by Foreign Minister Email Fahmy. They went immediately to the riverside villa where President Anwer Sadat has been recuperating since last month from an attack of

Mr. Kissinger and the President met privately for an hour of what was later described as "serious conversation." The Amer-

Now both sides are talking about a significant disengagement," these officials said, although there is still no agreement on the extent of the withdrawal, the firepower that remaining troops would have and the methods of enforcement.

The two sides were pictured as "leaning toward" acceptance of a UN enforcement mechanism. An American ambassador to an oil-producing nation said privatethat an intervention could legg not only to destruction of a major portion of the world's o i supply but elso to a holocaust with fallout effects similar to there of an atomic bomb.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, the principal Arab oil-producing naions, have placed explosive charges around their major oil fields which can be set off at a moment's notice, according to reports reaching here.

The ambassador said it would be virtually impossible to put out the fires resulting from such explesions. Further, he said, prevailing winds would carry the dense smoke clouds across the Persian Gulf to Iran, where the fallout of sulphur dioxide could result in the deaths of thousands.

Petroleum experts said that the high content of sulphur dioxide in smog was responsible for such nir pollution disasters as the one in London more than 20 years ago which took 3,500 lives. Dense smoke clouds from oil fires could be even deadlier, they

Oil experts also noted the extreme difficulty of putting out oil-field fires once they start.

The most immediate Arab concern over the possible use of U.S. troops to selze the oil fields arose from a statement Monday by American Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger that the Arabs would be risking the use of force against them if they

Rep. Mayne, 56, is a trim, graying, self-assured conservative who is quickly recognized in many parts of his district. He graduated from Harvard University and the University of Iowa Law School, has practiced law in northwest Iowa for 20 years and is a past president of the Iowa Bar Association. He is up for re-election this fall. "I have not found impeach

It is whether we are going to have enough gasoline, whether there will be enough fuel oil if this weather continues... But obviously people here are quite aware that impeachment is a possibility and that I am in a position to have to face it soon and publicly."

In answer to questions about impeachment, Rep. Mayne carefully avoided either supporting Mr. Nixon directly or attacking him. He conceded to several audiences that he was well aware that Watergate was going to have an effect on Iowa congressional races this fall.

"Tve never supported Nixon 100 percent." he said. "nor will I ever do so. If the evidence is there to convince me, I will vote to impeach him. It is not an easy

10 Years After Surgeon-General's Report

Smoking Up in U.S. Despite Health Warning

By Jane E. Brody

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (NYT) .-Ten years ago today, the surgeon general of the United States issued a momentous report citing cigarette smoking as a major hazard to life and health. Yet the anniversary of that 387-page document finds cigarette sales at an all-time lugh, per capita consumption increasing and 8,000 teen-agers becoming new smokers each day.

Despite repeated scientific confirmation of the surgeon general's warnings, an ever-expanding list of smoking-related risks, an intense educational effort, restrictions on cigarette advertising and a growing force of nonsmokers seeking to limit smoking in public places, about 40 percent of men and 30 percent of women are cigarette smokers.

An estimated 10 million Amercans—mostly men—have quit rigarettes since the report was issued, but the population growth and a steady influx of new smokers have increased the ranks of current smokers from 50 million in 1964 to 52 million to-

However, public health officials estimate that the report and the studies, warnings and educational efforts it generated belped to reverse a trend that

Peace Corps Is Unable to Fill Quota of 50 in India This Year

By Bernard Weinraub

NEW DELHI, Jan. 11 (NYT).-The U.S. Embassy and the Peace Corps are involved in a dispute over the corps's inability to fill its quota of 50 here this year.

The dispute is especially embarrassing to the embassy because Peace Corps activity has been a weathersane of U.S.-Indian relations, and India's expressed desire to have American corpsmen was seen as another eifor: to overcome the chill in re-lations with Washington.

Moreover, U.S. officials are annoyed at the Peace Corps leadership in Washington because India was a center of corps activity and, in 1966, welcomed 1,200 corpsinen, more than any other nation. The mability to fill the quota of 50 is greeted with open dension by embassy of-

Currently there are only 11 Peace Corps workers in India, but they will end their two-year stims by the end of January. In addition there are six trainees who will start work on agricultural projects in Rajasthan at the end of February. The Peace Corps and embassy had expected at least 20 to be training.

Virtually all nations with agencies similar to the Peace Corps have quotas of 50 in India. Mr. Nixon and the Milk Deal

"Nobody gets anything back as far as the general contributions are concerned in this administration. Second, as far as those who receive them are concerned, they must be accepted with no misunderstandings, expressed or implied, that anything is to be done. as a result of those contributions, that would not be done in the ordinary course of events."

-President Nixon, in his press conference of March 37, 1972.

"In terms of campaign contributions I have had a rule . . . I have refused to have any discussion of contributions. As a matter of fact, my orders to Mr. [Maurice] Stans were that after the campaign was over, I would then send notes of appreciation to those that contributed, but before the election. I did not want to have any information from anybody with regard to campaign contributions."

-President Nixon, in his press conference of Oct. 26, 1973.

Well, after the months of denials and the months of litigation over access to evidence. it now turns out that, yes, Mr. Nixon knew quite a lot about the milk producers' contributions. The White House published on Tuesday a long and intricate answer to the charges of corruption in the 1971 decision to raise milk-price supports. The President now concedes that he did indeed know of the proffered contributions when, on two occasions, he made decisions of great importance to the dairy industry.

and the second of the second o

Mr. Nixon defends himself by arguing that he never took these financial offers into account, and that he made his decisions solely on the public and stated grounds. The contributions, he emphasizes, were no more than the customary campaign assistance from professional lobbying organizations like, for example, the labor unions that are the Democrats' mainstay. It is perfectly legal, of course, for a lobbyist to make a donation to a political campaign, as long as it is not contingent on a specific official action. To make a firm agreement exchanging a contribution for a specific action by a public official, on the other hand, gets into the realm of bribery. Bribery is not only a crime but, under the Constitution, it is grounds for impeachment. The distinction between a legal contribution and a criminal bribe may seem a thin distinction to establish, in the turmoil of actual political campaigning. But in this case a great deal turns on it, and the best way to approach a judgment on the milk case is through its chronology:

• In August, 1969, a lawyer for the Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) put $100.000 into a briefcase and delivered the briefcase to Herbert Kalmbach, then House paper published Tuesday says that Mr. Nixon had no knowledge of this contribution.

ptember, 1970, Charles W. Colson. then a presidential aide, wrote a memo to Mr. Nixon telling him that the AMPI had pledged $2 million to the 1972 campaign. "That memorandum was attached." the White House paper says, "to a presidential briefing paper for the courtesy meeting between the President and the AMPI representatives of September of 1970." But, the White House document continues, there was "no mention of the asserted pledge during the meeting." The 1972 Nixon campaign was evidently getting off to an early start, since the 1970 elections had not yet been held.

• The promise of $2 million was repeated on Dec. 16, 1970, in a letter to Mr. Nixon from his old associate Patrick J. Hillings, a lawyer then representing the AMPI. The White House says that Mr. Nixon never saw that letter. But it arrived at a moment when the administration was considering import quotas on dairy products. Two weeks after Mr. Hillings wrote his letter, the President imposed the quotas. The White House argues that the President's quotas were. after all, less favorable to the dairy industry than those recommended by the Tariff Commission on purely economic grounds.

• The climax to the AMPI's lobbying effort, and the incident around which the charge of scandal mainly revolves, is a meeting held at the White House on March 23. 1971. A few days earlier the then Secretary of Agriculture, Clifford Hardin, had turned down the dairymen's demands for a higher support price for milk. On March 22, the AMPI donated $10,000 to Mr. Nixon's campaign. The following day, the way thus prepared, the dairy spokesmen came in to see the President.

"Prior to this meeting," Tuesday's White House paper says, "a staff memorandum was prepared as a briefing paper for the President. That paper briefly noted that the . dairy lobby - like organized labor - had decided to spend political money . . ." At this meeting, the White Rouse declares. "There was no mention whatsoever of campaign contributions."

• Two days later, on March 25, 1971, the Agriculture Department raised the milk supports. That increase added more than $500 million a year to milk producers' income. Mr. Nixon argues that the reasons were pressure from Democrats in Congress, the need to increase milk production, and the normal pursuit of farmers' votes. As it turned out, the dairymen gave less than their pledge. Their contribution came only to $437,000 which, as the White House notes, is less than 1 percent of the total funds collected for the 1972 campaign.

Throughout this paper there is the constant theme of Mr. Nixon's defense in this and all the other scandals: Everybody does it. In this instance, certainly, other people have done it. One of them was former Sen. Daniel Brewster, a Democrat from Maryland, who was sentenced to prison for accepting contributions that a jury found to be bribery.

The Brewster case is a particularly enlightening example in this gray and ambig-Mr. Nixon's personal attorney. The White uous corner of U.S. national life. The senator was fighting a mail-rate increase, and he took a contribution from a lobbyist representing a mail-order house. Was it a legal contribution, or corruption? Federal Judge George L. Hart told the jury that it was entirely proper for a company to make a contribution if it is only in the "hope" that a politician will maintain a general position helpful to the donor. But the jury decided that there was more involved in the Brewster contribution than "hope," and more than a general

> That is the question which, in this larger case, now goes to the larger jury of the American people. The record is presumably not yet complete, but it shows a close correspondence between pledges and contributions on one hand, and favorable actions on the other. As the White House now acknowledges-belatedly, as usual-Mr. Nixon was quite aware of the money that was being thrown on the scales in these public decisions. In fact, in many respects the "explanation" of the President's role in the milk case is reminiscent of his "explanation" of his larger Watergate involvements in the compendious May 22 document of last year. Like that document, this one constitutes a kind of shadowy, preemptive confession, a belated acknowledgement of certain presidential involvements that had hitherto been denied, and an attempt to precondition the public's response to possibly worse evidence to come.

(A future editorial will deal with Mr. Nixon and ITT.)

Kissinger's Latest Trip

For the fourth time in three months, Mr. Kissinger is going to the Middle East. As usual, his journey can be interpreted either optimistically or pessimistically One can deplore that yet another first-aid mission should be necessary to "save the collapsing cease-fire," or one can hope that the journey presages a new move forward on the uncertain road towards peace. Both interpretations are probably right. The process of peacemaking in the Middle East is like a blcycle ride: loss of momentum can lead to collapse. The fear of collapse is everpresent but is also creative, since it provides an incentive for further movement forward . . . Mr. Kissinger's task is to convince both sides . . . that disengagement is in the immediate interests of both of them and that if each side puts off its political demands until the next phase of negotiations then both sides will have an interest in that phase's success.

WASHINGTON-It's taken quite a while, but statesmen and business leaders seem finally to have awakened to the grim fact that the power of the Arab oil cartel to set extortionate prices is a graver threat to the rest of the world than production cuts and embargos, which are mere tactical

Or, to put it another way, the restoration of production cuts (for which Japan and Europe have been begging) or the abandon-ment of the embargo (for which) U.S. stock traders have been of unrestrained price increases' yearning; will leave the Western

The 400 percent increase in the price of oil set by the cartel-the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) — in 1973 would require such a shift of financial resources to the oilproducing countries that it could cause a world-wide economic upheaval and depression.

Growth Ceiling

For example, oil consultant Walter J. Levy estimated that Europe's oil bill this year will skyrocket to about $50 billion. compared with $11 billion in 1972 Japan's costs would jump to $17 billion from $3.6 billion (erasing its entire reserves). And these estimates assume, first, that there would be no further price increases, and second, that oil demand would be held down to the 1972 level, putting a celling on economic growth.

World Bank executive directors have met to receive comments from individual countries on a staff report which grimly concluded that the higher prices "present a radical turning point in the outlook for the world econ-

With the single exception of West Germany, no industrial country had a trade surplus in 1973 as large as its projected increase in imported oil costs. If prices stay at the exorbitant levels set by the cartel, the international monetary system could be wrecked by the effort to cope with a vas churning of funds between the exporting and importing countries. Most of the Arab oil-producing countries, even if they wanted to; are not in a position to increase their imports fast enough to help the industrialized countries boost their export earnings with which

Monopoly

The special concern at the World Bank is self-evident: The long and painful effort to enhance the growth and development of poor countries will be totally aborted by the quantum jumps in petroleum prices enforced by the Arab monopoly.

Yet, as MIT Professor M.A. Adelman pointed out at the recent American Economic Association meetings, the U.S. government persists in identifying Saudi Arabia—the cartel leader—43 2 friendly country, even though they financed the war against Israel (a client state of the United States) and then proceeded to wage an even more effective economic war against the United States and against other powers with whom, presumably, the United States is allied in many

Waya The Europeans and Japanese, for their part, went through shameful contortions to get on the good side of the Arabs, which will give them the dubious privilage of putting their citizens at the first sign that they are relenting on the embargo. The price, not the embargo, is the key issue. And a first step toward breaking the power of the cartel to set prices should be to recognize and declare that the embargo-as Prof. Richard Gard-

Kissinger didn't provide specific numbers, but the World Bank study gives a sense of the awful spot the Western world has allowed itself to Le maneuvered into. Assuming only an $8 price for Middle East oil by 1980 (which has now already been surpassed), the Bank study estimated that the OPIC country reserves would balloon to about $280 billion from a mere $5 billion in 1970. At that level, the OPEC countries would hold 70 percent of world reserves totalling some $400 billion.

The Western world can proceed to go bankrupt if it wants to, and let a small group of nations who hatten to be rich in oil reserves call the tune. That will merely encourage other nations who can create a monopoly of some other key raw materials to vie with the Arabs for a controlling share in the power structure.

Or, the consuming countries can get together in a mutual, cooperative effort to develop new sources of energy, and avoid the cutthroat scramble for oil that helped propel oil prices higher than the wildest Arab dream. The danger, I think, is that the Western world, hungry for shortterm relief, might temper a re-

Israeli Military Role

Guns and Democracy

By C. L. Sulzberger

DARIS.-In terms of politics, the most interesting feature of the Israeli crisis precipitated by last October's war was the astonishingly modest role played by the armed forces in the subtequent elections in December.

The troops voted to a massive way, as compared with the vote of serving soldiers in other de-mocracies. But if one judges by results, they voted with the same normal divisions of opinion as would have occurred in peacetime armies of free political systems elsewhere.

Much is made of the leading role played by flamboyant generals in the drama begun by the Yom Kippur conflict and continuing as a background to the Geneva peace conference.

Dayan and Sharon

This is especially true with respect to Defense Minister Moshe Dayan hero of Israel's previous armed conflicts, and Arik Sharon, architect of the dramatic Suez Canal crossing in October which encircled an Egyptian army. But Dayan is technically a civilian today and, like Sharon, a reservist. Both can therefore hold political office. In many contemporary lands, battlefield victories popularly linked with the names of men like Dayan and Sharon, both of whom are tied to political fac-tions, might have had a strong reflection at the polls or might even have led to abnormal and extra-parlinmentary intervention. One insurance against politicking by Israel's military is the constitutional provision that career officers can not seek civilian office-without first retiring. The period since Israel was created in 1948 has seen career officers' putsches create regimes in a host of contemporary governments including Egypt, Syria, Iraq, Algeria, Libya, Uganda, Indonesia, South Korea, Zaire, Nigeria, Ghana, Chile, Peru and Greece.

Indeed, it has been a thesis of some political theorists that in today's time of change when the so-called Third World is coming into its own, it is an understandable occurrence that professional officers, with their pa-triotic zeal, discipline and distaste for corruption, should seize

Turbulent Area

Portunately for Israel, this temptation has never been the case. Despite its situation in a turbulent area where violence has been the norm for a quarter of a century the Israelis have passignately adhered to civilian deniocratic rule

Dayan has been cruelly blamed for misfortunes (including large casualties) that bave piled up modelled.

since the Your Kippur attack on Israel and Sharon was contrast. ingly acclaimed for his canal crossing and encirclement of the Egyptians.

In an artificially over-simplified political sense, Sharon represent ed an extreme right and have ish faction in comparison with Dayan's relatively (and only reatively) dovish and accommodat. ing position. Yet both men backers and both men adhered rigidly to the ultimate test as a laid down for normal damped racies—judgment by the ballout box. Nor was there the slightest thought of a potential coun.

On more than one occasion that asked high Israel asked have asked high Israell offices whether they considered to position whether they considered to position sible for a military putsch to seize power in their embattled little country (Sen Abana Sen) little country Gen. Aharon Yard retired chief of intelligence acknowledged that theoretically this could be possible; all one needed was intelligence, armor and aircraft, as shown both in Iraq and Greece.

Nevertheless, this "technical" observation was not only theory. ical but actually impossible. In rael's democratic spirit is diff. cult to minimize and this spint is based upon a tradition that the army is subject to civilish authority.

The great majority of the armed forces are civilians called up from regular jobs whenever the state deems necessary. Only the air force has a majority of career personnel; the small may is about 60-50. In the arm, career personnel begin with a few noncommissioned officers and then, from sergeant majors m the percentage increases.

Deeply Imbedded

But, as Yariv pointed out the officer corps does not live apart from the rest of the population Colonels and generals come from every sector—commerce, village, towns, kibbutzim. There is no common social denomination le the officers. The concept democracy is deeply imbedded.

In past years, when Israel mflitary genius was unchallenged, European observers often compared its armed provess to that of 18th-century Prussa which maximized use of interna communication lines agains larger, hostile neighbors. But one shouldn't forget and other European comparison, wderscored by the recent elections. Regardless of strain and criss use of its mainly reservist army. the chances of military domination of Israel's political desting seem no greater than that of Switzerland, on whose dema cratically available civilian-so diery Israel's army was first

FBI 'Bugged' Socialist Unit For 18 Years

By Farnsworth Fowle NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (NYT) .-

The federal government has acknowledged "electronic surveil-lance" of members of the Socialist workers party from 1945 to 1963. It has further ac-knowledged a "Socialist Workers party disruption program," conducted by the FBI from 1961 to

A reply filed in federal court to the party's complaint of July 18, 1973, was made public yesterday at a news conference called by the Political Rights Defense Fund, which is raising money for the costs of the court action. The Socialist Workers' 1972 presidential candidate, Linda Janness, took part. The acknowledgments were not couched in apologetic language. The government reply said the "basic purpose" of the disruption program was "to alert the public to the fact that SWP is not just another Socialist group but fol-lows the revolutionary principles of Marx Lenin and Engels as interpreted by Leon Trotsky." The party is seeking further information on the "disruption program."

The FBI made public last Dec. J. Edgar Hoover, issued to all of-fices on May 10, 1968, to begin an attack against groups and in-dividuals "who spout revolution and unlawfully challenge society to obtain their demands." This and other counterintelligence programs were terminated without explanation in a Hoover directive of April 28, 1971. The organizations and individuals were not identified at that time.

In the document made public yesterday, there was a general denial of unwarranted use during the 1972 and 1973 election cam-paigns of devices to intercept confidential conversations of SWP members, supporters and candidates. It acknowledged knowing of only one such wiretap—in 1972, on the home in Los Angeles of James P. Cannon, then national chairman, on the basis of

French Official Is Identified in : == Canard Bugging

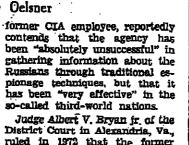

PARIS, Jan. 11 (Renters) .-The concierge of a building housing the offices of the satirical weekly Le Canard Enchaine today formally picked out at an identity parade a French counterespionage agent alleged to have been involv-ed in bugging the Canard's offices. But Micheline Bertin later falled to pick out the voice of the same man Inspector Georges Laborde of the Direction de la Surveillance du Territoire, when tested again by Examining Magistrate Alain Bernard.

Mrs. Bertin, who said Inspec tor Laborde had asked her three times for the keys to the Canard's offices, said, "I know faces very well. In my job as concierge I have to watch who I give keys to. This man came to see me several times, and I saw him much more than any other witness.'

Inspector Laborde told Magis-trate Bernard that he had a beard at the time she says she got to recognize him and added that "160 witnesses this colleagues at work? can confirm it." Four other witnesses called today-two workmen, an electrician and the concierge's husband-all failed positively to identify the

Indian State Reports Ten Killed in Riots

NEW DELHI Jan 11 (Reuters).—Troops patrolled the streets of two major cities in the State of Gujarat today after rioting over food shortages and mounting inflation claimed at least 10 lives.

Officials in Ahmedabad, the capital of the western Indian state, said police this morning two persons and wounded four in the town of Visnagar, bringing the death toll for two days of bloody riots to 10. Despite the use of troops and a curfew, officials reported scores of incidents of arson, looting and other violence in Ahmedabad and Baroda. Police used rifles, clubs and tear gas at several places to fight mobs armed with stones, bricks and iron bars. No official estimates were available of the number injured, but it was unofficially put at well

The trouble followed weeklong protests by students against the soaring cost of living—up 24 per-cent in one year—and the cutting of food rations because of short

CHICAGO, Jan. 11 (AP: -Death stalked Chicago businessman Samuel Popell for two days before a would be killer had a change of heart and contacted authorities, the police said

They said two California men had been hired to kill the kitchen-gadget millionaire and one of them followed Mr. Popell for two days with a pistol, waiting for a chance to strike. The man never got the opportunity and returned to Cali-fornia where he and another man decided to confess the plot to the police, the authorities said. In California, the police arrested Mr. Popell's estranged wife, Eloise, 48, and Daniel M. Ayers, 37, of Santa Ana. They are accused of hiring the two men, who were not identified. The police said both men may escape charges in return for their testimony at the trial of Mr. Ayers and Mrs. Popell. who were arraigned yesterday in Long Beach on charges of conspiracy to commit murder. A trial date will be set at a preliminary hearing Jan. 31, Investigators in California said the alleged deal was for $35,000 before the murder and $25,000 after. The authorities said that had Mr. Popeil died before a divorce from his wife. NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (NYT) .-The Encyclopaedia Britannica is coming out in a new form-its first major innovation in more than 200 years of publication.

Plans for the new version of the American-based encyclopedia have been in progress for about 25 years, and active work has been under way for at least a dozen years.

In its forthcoming form-the first complete sets are due Feb. 22, with the publication date in mid-March — the encyclopedia will be a three-part work.

The retail price is expected to be $550, compared with $498 for the current edition. A New York bookseller said he expected to offer sets for about $350.

The first Volume Proposition sets forth a classification of all knowledge into 10 parts, each

New York's Pro Musica To Disband

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (NYT),-The New York Pro Musica Antique, for two decades the leading ensemble in this country dedicated to the performance of medieval and Renaissance music. will be disbanded at the end of its current season. The announcement was made by Mrs. Nosh Greenberg, president of the Pro Musica board.

The decision to end the operations of the ensemble was made refuctantly, but unanimously, by the board members in a meeting on Dec. 25.

"Money was a major factor," Mrs. Greenberg said, "but the uncertainty of bookings and the fact that George Houle, the current musical director, had decided to return to California were also significant."

Pro Musica, which gave its first public concert at the New School for Social Research in April, 1953, was founded by Noah Greenberg, who was its musical director until his death at the age of 46 on Jan. 9, 1966.

Under his dynamic leadership, the group quickly established its authority in the early-music field, and despite the recondite nature of the works it sang and played and its pioneering in unfamiliar performance styles, it achieved extraordinary popularity, At the height of its activity and influence, Pro Musica was giring some 175 performances annually in America and abroad. In this, its final season, it is doing about 100 performances. Mr. Houle, who taught at Stanford University before joining Pro Musica, is returning to California to teach. He said Wednesday that he regretted deeply the "passing of a great institution that served so long as a beacon for all people interested in early music."

Mrs. Greenberg said that the nonprofit Pro Musica corporation is faced with "enormous liabilities." "If the tours and performances we have to fulfill do not lose money, and if we can sell our library and instrument collection for what we think they are worth, we should just about come out even.

She estimated the value of the library at $50,000 and that of the instrument collection at $30,000. "We will sell them as an intact collection, if possible,"

But, it seems to me that record prices, totally unelated to general art market rends, may again be expected this category next season. I am convinced that Chinese art a firmly entrenched because the doors to China are closed when comes to exporting antiquities. The two strongest markets for hinese art objects remain Britain and the United States where such objects are more highly prized than ever.

At the opposite geographical pole of the market, top quality European porcelain experienced a similar boom. A Meissen corfeepot painted in Augsburg by Sabina Aufenwerth for her hushand Isaac Hosennestel on Böttger porcelain might not have arouseverybody's enthusiasm. Aesthetically, the pot (21 centimeters high) had little to recommend—its gaudy chinoiserie borders on the vulgar. But the concealed monograms, SA and IH establishing the identity_of the artist, made it unusual. The coffeepot had been in the collection of Mary Lees Johnstone and that was enough to raise the price to a staggering £40.000. Italian faience has been af-Durante service painted by Nicola Pellipario around 1519 went for £20,000 last March. Again, it had all the pluses that make prices The artist identified as was the patron

It had been copied from an engraving by the socalled "Master of the Die" who, in turn, had been inspired by Raphael. Plates from this service are also to be seen in the Victoria and Albert Museum the British Museum and the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cam-bridge, England—all splendid references. In addition, the plate in question had been successively the Morosini collection (one polished and colorful. A pair of so-called Vienna. Lohengrin vases, dripping in gold on a deep-blue ground with lots of neo-medieval figures, was ex-pensive at £1,700. A Royal Worcester porcelain vase by James Hadley, dated 1888, with a kind of neo-Remissance decoration, was even more ex-pensive at £1,950. It had, of course, a molded signature "impressed and printed crowned circle mark in puce" and a code mark indicating that it had been made in 1888 in Model No. 1264. Fanatics for detail could hardly wish for more. Aesthetically, the vases were not far removed from the earlier works that had inspir-

These records, it seems to me, reflect a change in taste, a new affection for the academic, the saccharine 18th-century art that was consigned, a few years ago, to commercial oblivion. It seems likely that this shift in taste may cause a rise in price for Louis XV and Louis XVI knickknacks in porcelain and ormolu. This could explain the £6,800 paid for an ebonized bonheurdu-jour (small desk) with deco-rative porcelain insets made in Germany around 1860. The 15thcentury objets d'art that are going up in price are those that closest to the "past," or rather, those that provide a Hollywood vision of it.

Just as significant as record prices have been the certain market weaknesses. Archae-clogical objects from the Near East—and sometimes from the West—are not doing very well. As usual, there are exceptions. The most obvious one is classical work, it lends itself to very precise dating and identification The same applies to classical Greek pottery. A very fine Attic vase, circa 510 BC, brought a comfortable 12,800 in July, 1973. Nevertheless, archaeological objects can prove to be disappointing investments. A Romano-Egyptian stucco portrait from the Fayum—it was of very fine quality—fetched only $1,200 in July, 1973, hardly more-in absolute terms—than the £950 it had made in 1964 at Sotheby's. An unusual ensemble of Roman sculpture was sold in December

ENTERTAINMENT IN NEW YORK-

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (IHT).— This is how New York critics rate new stage productions:

"More Than You Deserve," a musical at the Public Theater. written by Michael Weller and composed by Jim Steinman, with lyrics by both, is a satire about American military action in the Mekong Delta. It's a witless, puerile, vulgar and miserable jest," says Willam Glover of the Associated Press. "Ever so youth-ful-cutesy and juvenile profound," the undertaking is no second
"Hair," the critic says. Kim Friedman directs the cast of 17
"with exuberant gusto devised to enthrall younger speciators" but "the performing talents are un-evenly matched." Glover found commander but others are "less endurable." In The New York Times Mel Gussow reports that the "show is harsh and heartless; it never really comes to terms with the horrors of Vietnam, Douglas Watt of the Daily News said it was "savage, raunchy and terribly uneven; while Richard Watts

(New York Post) "hated it wholeheartedly."

"Short Eyes" by Miguel Pincro. 27-year-old playwright, poet and former prison inmate, had its world premiere at Theater of the Riverside Church. Mel Gussow of The New York Times describes Pinero as "an original writer, whose plays we will be anticipating and witnessing for many years to come." "Short Eyes" is, as the subtitle indicates, about "The Killing of a Sex Offender by the Inmates of the House of Detention Awaiting Trial." The offend-er—"short eyes" in prison slang —is white. All but one of the other inmates are black or Puerio Rican. "Despite their own records," Gussow says, "they think of criminal, an object of diagust. 'Short Eyes' is not a perfect play. At moments its plotting is too tricky." But the play is "instruc-tive and provocative." Maryin Felix Camillo directed a cast made up mostly of ex-inmates.

"Richard II." the Royal Shakespeare Company's success at Stratford-Upon-Avon last season, has opened the first British theater season at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. It pleased the New York critics, Producer John Barton takes an approach to the play that is both Virile and yet. academic, says Clive Barnes of The New York Times. For Barton the essence of the play is in its wheel of fortune, with the counterweighted destinies of the deposed King Richard and his usurping rival Bolingbroke. The production makes much of this even to the extent of having the actors who play the two roles alternating each part in succesperformances. The setting by nothy O'Brien and Tazzena Firth accentuates this concept of divinity of kingship." Ian Richardson's Richard is "full of spirit and a certain heroism."

says Barnes. "Richard Pasco's counterpoised Bolingbroke is bluff, stiff and tortured.

"Scott and Zelda," a new play by Paul Hunter, has two things going for it—Scott and Zelda

Fitzgerald-says Clive Barnes of The New York Times. But. Barnes adds, "It remains just a brave try. It tells the story without truly illuminating it. A pitfall of theatrical biography is that we either already know more about the subject than can be put on the stage or the subject himself is not very interesting. With the Scott Pitzegeralds the former is the ease." The play at the Theater de Lys. has been well staged by Herbert Machiz and is "admirably acted." Kathryn Loder as Zelda has "the right butterfly poignancy," and the "tortured diffidence of Nicholas Prior as Scott was impressive."

LONDON THEATER

Comedy and Melodrama and Some Sour Notes

By John Walker

ONDON, Jan. 11 (IHT).-Two sour plays this week: one-David Fitzsimmons's "Judies" at the Comedy—a comedy; the other —David Rudkin's "Ashes" at the Open Space—a melodrama.

Mr. Rudkin attempts to link private tragedy—a young couple's failure to have children-with public-the violent upheavals in Northern Ireland. In this he fails, for the personal disaster of two lives made empty and rootless is a poor metaphor for the Irish troubles, despite some heavy symbolism of the wife's miscarriage with twins, a dead child dragging a healthy one to a bloody, premature death.

. Mr. Rudkin is an apocalyptic playwright. His language is fierce charged with emotion, clotted with images of blood, death, and sex. His characters describe in graphic detail the aftermath of a bomb explosion—"The nethers of a pregnant woman skewered on a bus stop spike"-and talk casually of castrated pigs grubbing up their own testicles and eating them. His language often falls into the rhythms of Victorian melodrama. The husband laments at one point: "If I had been content, content, my wife would have her womb this day."

The Writing

It is writing that is both powerful and shocking at its best and seems energized by some deep. private pain. Yet the images are often overblown, dissipating their emotional charge. And Mr. Rudkin piles horror on horror. When the wife becomes pregnant, she not only miscarries but has to have her uterus removed, and the couple's attempt to adopt a child ends in failure.

The opening of the play is lighter in mood, with brisk satire at the expense of doctors and RECORD HOLDER-Roy Dotrice whose "Brief Lives," a one-man show based on the memoirs of the 17th-century biographer John Aubrey, ran for 213 performances in 1969, a world record run for a solo actor. He will open in the same show Tuesday at the Mayfair, London.

specialists, as the couple trail from one to the other in an at-tempt to discover why they cannot conceive, although neither is apparently infertile.

The act of sex becomes more and more mechanical, as sperm counts are taken, temperature charts kept, and strange posttions suggested by the experts. It seems at first as if Mr. Rud-kin is going to examine the ten-tions of a childless marriage and the reasons people want children. The husband, whose sexuality embraces men as well as wemen, wonders if he merely seeks reassurance of his masculinity. But it is not long before the subject changes to the Irish sit-uation. The husband is an Ulsterman, a Protestant, who returns home for the tuneral of his uncle, killed in a bomb explosion, and finds himself alienated from his family, rejected for not sharing their violent, sinplistic anti-Catholic views.

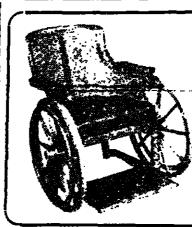

The play becomes more selfpitying as it continues, ending with arias of bitterness and miscry. It is well acted by Peter Mc-Enery as the husband and Lynn Farleigh as the wife, changing from exuberance to apathy, and Ian Collier as a succession of sex experts, and Penny Ryder as several un-ympathetic and feeund women. Pam Brighton directs.

I enjoyed David Fitzsimmons a "Judies" when I first saw it at the Howif. On its transfer to the Comedy Theatre, it remains a elever, heartless comedy of the transformation of Stanley (John Alderton: from a shy, virginal mother's boy into a randy male chauvinist pig at the hands of two cexually voracious teachers, played with bitchy relish by Pauline Collins and Christine liargeaucs. It is a first play, and a very promising one, and often dislike its sexual attitudes. It is though, somewhat thin stuff for a West End theater and is often sustained by the sensitivity of John Alderton's performance.

Under the general title of "Family Romances," a season of three plays directed by Jonathan Miller opens at the Greenwich Theatre on Thursday. The first production is Ibsen's "Gnosts." with a cast that includes Anthony Brown, Peter Eyre, Nicola Pagett, Robert Stephens, and Irene Worth, and it will be followed by Chekhov's "The Seaguil" and Shake: pearc's "Humlet."

'Mousetrap' Moving

LONDON, Jan. 11 (AP).-Agatha Christic's thriller "The Mousetrap," which claims the world record for the longest run at a single theater, will close March III at the Ambassadors, it will reopen March 25 at St. Martin's Theatre next door. "The Mousetrap" has to change theaters, impresario Peter Saunders said vesterday after the 8,777th performance, because the lease on the Ambussadors is running out

Japan Purchased Wheat to Avoid Price Increases TOKYO. Jan. 11 (AP-DJ) .-

Japan's large-scale purchase of Canadian wheat this week was made to avoid possible higher prices later in the year, an official in the import division of the government's food agency said today.

He confirmed reports from the United States and Canada that the agency bought 35.5 million bushels, or about 96,000 tons, of Canadian red spring wheat earlier this week, but he declined to disclose the price. One report from Winnipeg said the Japanese paid about $5.05 a bushel and that the report price for the same wheat has since risen to $5.86. The official said the wheat is to be exported from Canada in April, arrive in Japan in May and go on the domestic market in August. The Japanese still have fresh memories of last year's soybean debacle, when short supplies resulted in skyrocketing prices and an eventual temporary ban on reports by the United States. These developments greatly alarmed the Japanese public, which was told that Japans sovbean stocks would soon be exhausted if the United States embargo were long continued. and pressure mounted on the government for longer-range import planning.

WASHINGTON Jan. 11 (AP-DJ).—To a growing number of influential U.S. senators and congressmen, the commodities futures apparatus is growing into monster that is capable of going on binges that victimize farmers and consumers alike.

These legislators nervously recall the wild commodity price gyrations of last summer and feer more of the same could come in the new year. They question whether the present reliance on self-policing of markets plus a thinly manned government reg-ulatory agency is enough to prevent possible wrongdoing in to-day's trading melees.

The entire membership of the House Agriculture Committee is calling for an overhaul in regu-lation of the trading of such as soybeans and pork

but real action may finally begin after Congress returns to work late this month. Just how far the lawmakers will go is not clear, but many senators, congressmen, Agriculture Department officials and some commoditymarket people are betting on the following:

• A heavily-staffed commis-sion will be established to oversee futures trading, much as the Securities and Exchange Commission watches the stock and bond markets. Most people agree that the existing Commodity Exchange Authority, with weak powers and a relatively small staff of 160, cannot cope with the burgeoning markets. The SEC has stronger authority and a force of some 1,600 to do its policing job. • The new commission will be given power to impose injunctions on traders it suspects are attempting to manipulate any part of the market. Convicted wrongdoers will face fines and iail sentences All traded commodities, including metals, sugar, coffee, cocoa and others currently outside the CEA's hailfwick will be brought under the commission's jurisdiction. • The commission will be empowered to set "margins," which determine the minimum amount

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (Reuters). -The stock market staged its best performance in more than a week today, pushing ahead across a fairly broad front on moderate turnover.

There was nothing specific to account for the better tone. Analysts suggested that the cain probably was more technical than anything else in view of the mar-ket's headlong retreat the previous three sessions.

Investors also were hopeful that the latest mission to the Middle Eist by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger would prove more fruitful than in the past.

MARTHA GRAHAM

By Don McDonagh. Mustrated. Praeger. 841 pp. $10.95

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

the tyranny of prettiness. Just as she reinizoduced the law of gravity into dance—by bringing it down to earth—so she brought out the gravity of her sex as well. If women soared in ballet, they bore down in Graham. Her work was a flat-footed confrontation with the anatomy of femininity. While ballet embel-lished women—even in dying, they were graceful as swans— Miss Graham investigated their anguish, Her choreography was as realistic as ballet was artificial.

The world, of course, was not ready for anything truly radical. Some found her dances ugly, and sometimes, I suppose, they may well have been, for beauty is only one among many of women's op-tions. There is no denying the fact that the obligation to be beautiful is extremely confining. Anyone who sits through a poorly balanced evening of ballet—as I sometimes have—will recognize this. I think modern art uses the ugly at least as much as the beautiful and it is necessary to remember that both these words are highly imprecise. Miss Graham transcends both definitions. It. might be safest to say that she plays them off against each other.

I remember seeing Miss Graham years ago at a theater where Katherine Dunham, the primitive dancer, had appeared the week before. Two smart-looking wo-men sitting in front of me had apparently attended the other program too, for after a long, particularly anguished solo by Miss Graham, one of them turn-ed to the other and said: "Well, my dear, Dunham did fertility and here's Martha with meno-pause." Like witticks the remark may be unfair, but it raises an interesting question: "Why shouldn't Miss Graham do a dance about menopause? The end of fertility is almost as dramatic in the life of a woman as its beginning and if anyone could choreograph this, she could. For all I know, I may in fact have seen her do it, under the guise of Greek tragedy.
As Don McDonagh observed in his much needed critical biography of Martha Graham, she left very few female emotions un-choreographed. She has always been the most militant feminist who ever lived and the most talented. In both ballet and society, women had been "only a bird in a gilded cage." When Miss Graham opened the cage, the bird became a bat out of hell, among other things. She defiance, panted instead of pir-ouetted, brought the heavy burden of her body and soul onto the stage. Many of Miss Graham's dances might justly be called vivisections, Here was a striptease with a vengeance, as she tore off veil after veil to show us facets of femininity that many men-and not a few womenmight have preferred to keep under cover.

Mr. McDonagh, who is a dance critic for The New York Times, traces Miss Graham's evolution as she gropes for her vocabulary, finds and refines it. He shows us

MARTHA Graham emancipated how she used breathing as a connective beat, how her movements arose always out of dramatic necessity, never expediency. He follows her from her early percussive, transitionless intransigeance to the lyrical elegance she created when her fight was won and she knew she could afford it. Interviewing friends, atsocietes and members of her company, painstakingly research-ing the 50 years of her career, he tells us about her feelings, her thinking, her reading, her ap-proach to both choreography and training.

Though he must have been hampered by the dissension that has haunted the Graham Company for at least a decade, by Miss Graham's own unwilling-ness to explain herself, by the silence imposed on those who wished to stay in her favor, Mr. McDonagh has given us a com-mendably detailed picture.

Since Miss Graham is such an intense subject, he has kept his own tone under discreet control Realizing that no words can convey the experience of her dancing, he resists this rhetorical temptation and does a good job of describing her work. He is particularly adept at relating Miss Graham's themes to her life, taking the tension between her puritan background and her thrust toward freedom as the source of her early American pieces, and her hauteur, her increasingly "cosmic" pose, as the impulse behind her later absorption in Greek drama and mythol

Ogy. He does not hesitate to say of Miss Graham that she eas interested in herself and the present." Anything she could not perform, she tended to dismiss. Originally, she admitted menino her company only because the needed them as pylons around which she could career, Though she fell in love more than once we get the impression that sie merely "used" men in what wom-en would call a "sexist" way. She showed little interest in choresgraphing their problems, beyond casting them, as Mr. McDonagh puts it, as "ringmaster" and "acrobat," apt evocations of Erick Hawkins and Merce Cunningham, In referring to her imperious will Mr. McDonagh reminds us that before she became famous this may have been the only force holding her company together. Remarking that, in the last decade, "she had become the hos-tage of her own fame," he is generous enough to see this not only as a punishment she brought tion that always threatens genius

When Miss Graham said that she invented nothing, only rediscovered what the human body could do, it was perhaps her one moment of modesty. But even if we accepted this understatement. it would still place her among those few who have carried out image of ourselves beyond our wildest imagining—and who did it, for the most part, against our own stubborn wills mildly about the supposed advantages the Dolphins had in practice times and sites. Since this is so unlike the mild Grant, there was suspicion that the Viking mentor was attempting to stir his players or to psychologi-cally combat Shula, who has been a vaudevillian with continuing quips, easy going repartee, oozing confidence all the while.

Vikings Coach Expects Dolphins Will Be 'Loose and Sure'

By Dave Brady

HOUSTON, Jan. 11 (WP),-Bud Grant, whose Minnesota Vikings came out throwing on first down against Dallas two weeks ago, says: "I am sure the Dolphins will come out zinging on Sunday."

Grant reasoned that, since Miami coach Don Shula already has won a Super Bowl, and has been to it three times before. the Dolphins will be "free. loose and sure" for his fourth one, Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton said that the Vikings

Asked what defensive weakness of the Dolphins he might exploit, he replied, "They don't have one." Grant cautioned the media-and indirectly the Dolphinsagainst jumping to the conclusion that Super Bowl VIII would be a high-scoring game. "I previously said our game with the Redskins would be a low-scoring game and it was 27-20," h pointed out. The messages of Grant and Tarkenton could be intended as messages for the Vikings, too. Weeb Ewbank, the only coach to win it all in both conferences. has predicted that the Dolphins win by 23-14. He picked predicted that running quarterback Joe Kapp of the Vikings one day would handleap his team by an injury because he declined to run out of bounds, and Kapp wrecked his shoulder as the Kansas City Chiefs crushed the Vikings.

Grant once more stood up for his players with snipings at the commissioner's office about the accommodations at the Vikings practice field, as if he knew they respond best to disadvantages, as in cold Minnesota. Restating his confidence in the Vikings' ability to surmount adversity. Grant said "but, as I said on Tuesday, the players are The veterans [code word for being downgraded as the oldest team in the NFL1 loose. They are very close —though that is a cliché—and

In contrast to quarterback Bob Griese who said Tuesday, "That's chough about my personal life. I'm a shy and very private nerson." Tarkenton was expan-sive and said, in a reference to George Allen's complaint about the press in Super Bowl VII, "Distractions don't bother me.

Asked About Bandage

He did stipulate, however, that he would have no comment on sulything said about himself attributed to former coach Norm Van Brocklin. In the framework, Tarkenton alluded to Van Brocklin's dislike of scrambling quarterbacks when he was asked of his throwing wrut.

"I burned it skidding on the surface when I got knocked down by one of our big linemen," he explained, "while I was in the pass pocket." After beating the Cowboys for his first NFC championship, Tarkenton said, The idea that scramblers cannot win titles is a lot of garbage."

He also mimicked satirically the oft-stated theory that "tou cun't throw deep against a zone defense" after he nailed down the victory over the Cowboys with a 54-yard touchdown pass to flanker John Gullam.

The pattern of the exhibitions will have each player alternating rival, in a 17-day tour. The itinerary calls for stops at Fort Lauderdale, Pla., Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver and Chicago for the finale on Jan. 24. The players are shooting for no mean objective. It was in a dignified, restrained and tasteful atmosphere that the series began. The first match was at snocker, because Mosconi, on winning the toss, offered his rival the latter's specialty. As it turned out, it was a good gesture toward Williams, who has been the world professional snooker champion since 1968. He beat Mosconi at the opening snooker contest, 85-to-35, in 13 innings, with a high run of 52 against 19 for Mosconi.

Admittedly unskilled at snooker. Mosconi surprised himself by tak-ing the lead at the start. At one early point, the amiable Williams was moved to say, "Willie, this is supposed to be my game," after a particularly brilliant execution. Near the close Mosconi responded by cheering an equally effective effort by the Englishman.

The afternoon session was held before a casually attired group. but for the evening activity the affair was strictly black tie. The spectators, a good many of whom were familiar with snooker and its more involved scoring system, maintained a decorous silence all during play, but applauded gen-erously at the conclusion of each contest

Hayes, McNickle Lead Phoenix Open Golf

By Lincoln A. Werden

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 11 (NYT). Johnny Miller called yesterday's play a transition on the pro tour. Golfers in the first round of the $150,000 Phoenix Open "had to adjust to hitting the normal lies." The U.S. Open champion said, "We could not tee up on the fairways as we did last week in the Crosby.

Miller, who won the 54-hole rain-plagued Grosby, scored a 69 yesterday. The rules of golf, not winter rules, were observed.

Bruce Crampton of Australia, the 1973 Phoenix winner, said he had to remember not to pick the ball up from the fairways as he had been accustomed to doing last week under the unusual conditions in California, Crampton -was even with par at 71.

playing in his fourth tournament as a professional, scored a four-under-par 67 and tied with Artic McNickle, a 27-year-old Californian. McNickle gained attention last year when he beat Miller in the first round of the U.S. match play championship, Hayes had five birdies in his round of 67 and one bogey.

Lanny Wadkins was in the 69 bracket with Miller, Hubert Green and Jerry Heard, among others. Wadkins got his score despite hitting a ball into the pond at the 18th. He got a par by sinking a 25-foct putt. Tom Weis-kopf, the British Open champion was playing in the group back of Wadkins, also hit his second shot into the water at the same hole for a 6 and a 72. Miller called the 6,709-yard Crosby."

Mark Haves of Oklahoma City, course, revamped since the tournament was played here two years ago, "a great position course—the kind Ben Hogan likes, but the greens are grainy." Miller Barber of Sherman Texas, Paul Purtzer of Phoenix Bob Wynn of Xenia Ohio, and Fred Martin of Baytown, Texas, were in at 68.

"I was blanked," said Lee Trevino, referring to his card of four-over-par 75 that was barren of birdies, "I have no excuses. I finished dead last among 73 players when I last played here in 1970. I was guessing where my putts were going."

Then the talkative Texan said. "It serves me right for shooting a 75. I was laughing last week when I was watching the boys in the mud on television playing the

the San Diego Padres were sold for the first time, the brightest minds in the National League have decided for the fourth or flith time that they can't decide anything—whether the Padres should play the 1974 season; where they should play if at all; what city they should represent, if any; who's going to own them if they're

It should not be inferred, however, that these men are incapable of making up their minds. They have decided unequivocally that C. Arnholt Smith was mistaken when he advised them recently that he had sold the team to Mrs. Marjorie Lindheimer Everett and has been mentioned along with Steve Broidy and Sherrill Cowin, film producers, as members of a group of potential bidders with the blessing of Walter O'Malley, grand seigneur of the Los Angeles Dodgers. All three were associated with Mrs. Everett in the purchase of the club and all served with O'Malley as directors of a bank.

"We know what we would have done in San Diego." Mrs. Everett said, "but apparently somebody doesn't want baseball to succeed there. Do you suppose it would close the market on pay-TV if San Diego were O'Malley has long been interested in pay television as a source of greatly increased revenue for baseball. Ever since he moved the Dodgers West from Brooklyn 15 years ago, he has foreseen a day when their games would be piped into millions of Southern California homes, for a price.

"Having a club playing in San Diego when the Dodgers are at home would destroy pay-TV for the Dodgers," said Neil Papiano, Mrs. Everett's attorney. "To make it profitable, O'Malley would have to pipe his games south, because that's where the population is." "Then if a group favored by O'Malley were to buy the Padres, they would move in a year or so to Toronto or one of those domed studiums in Seattle or New Orleans?

he can't control. By the way, the city attorney of San Diego has said he would do everything he could to keep O'Malley's pay-TV out of town."

Papiano sald he felt the whole Everett group was out of the picture now, "except for a couple who were in only because O'Malley wanted them in." He meant Broidy and Cowin, whom Underwood let in he said, at O'Malley's insistence. The lawyer described the atmosphere of the Chicago meeting as "cordial but hostile, We were not their favorite people."

"It was obvious," he said, "that O'Malley pretty much runs the whole show. Statements he made in the meeting and out of the meeting made that clear. He told some of our people exactly what would happen, what they could do and couldn't do, before the meeting started.

"I tried before the meeting to get Bowie Kuhn to return my phone calls or meet with me, I failed. But I don't think the commissioner had anything to do with it, answay."

time in my life, I am terribly embarrassed. At Christmas, a few weeks ago, I gave all my readc" a present. It was the comet Kohoutek. I told you all that if you looked up in the sky from until Jan. 31 you would see it. It was nour comet, and it was given to you as a token appreclation for how nice all of you had been

Buchwald You can imagine my consternation when I discovered the other day that Kohoutek had not been delivered, and I have received many letters of complaint asking where it was. I immediately called the Universal Star Company to find out what went wrong. After a dozen calls, I finally managed to get the sales manager in charge of comets on the phone.

After I had explained the problem, he said rather tersely Kohoutek, Kohoutek? Oh yes. here it is. Your comet was recalled. It had a faulty tail and a bad paint job. We're trying to make repairs on it now."

"But." I protested, "I was promised a dazzling display of celestial brilliance which would fill the sky with a million moons. I don't want a used comet that's been recalled for a faulty tail."

The sales manager replied: "If you look at your 90-day warranty, you will see that the company is responsible for everything that goes wrong except if the comet

Ghana Asks British To Return a Treasure

ACCRA, Jan. 11 (AP).-The Ghanaian government has asked Britain to return a golden stool taken when the British invaded the African kingdom of Ashanti a century ago. Ashanti is now a region of Ghans. An official said yesterday that the government was also taking steps to recover from Britain other treasures "stolen, smuggled or otherwise taken out of the country during British rule."

WASHINGTON.—For the first fails to shine or light up the sky." "But what good is a comet if you can't see it?" I asked.

> "The Universal Star Company has the best quality control of anyone in this business. Occasionally a mistake is made and we try to rectify it. But we nnot be responsible if something goes wrong with a star that is 50 million miles long, particularly during the energy

"But you advertised Kohoutek as the greatest thing since Halley's comet. You said that when it emerged from behind the sun it would be the most magnificent display of fireworks in the 20th century. You claimed it would be the most breathtaking galaxy of light in 2,000 years."

"Yes," said the sales manager, "our advertising agency did go little overboard on its copy. But there was no fraud intended. The comet is out there—it's just that you can't see it." "Well I think all of us should get our money back." "We can't do that," the sales manager replied. "If we refunded money to everyone who expected to see Kohoutek this January, the Universal Star Company would go out of business."

I became angry. "If you don't refund my money, I shall write a column saying the Universal Star Company is a fraud and that they sell cheap, unsafe comets."
"We're sorry you feel that way. But if we exchanged Kohoutek for you, we'd have to do it for everybody. Every universe has lemon or two. All we can do is fix the tail and hope for the

I hung up in disgust. So, dear reader, that's the story of your Christmas present. I wish I could give you something else in its place, but Kohoutek used up all my money. It was one lousy ripoff and I assure you it's going to be a long time before I buy a comet for anybody again.

The only thing I can do now to make up for the gift you never received is to promise in 1974 that I will never say in my columns, "Things have to get worse before they get better." I know it's not much of a gift compared to Kohoutek, but I'm sure as time goes on you'll appreciate it more and more.

An old view of the Versailles gardens. "The vast formal gardens of France were conceiped as settings for self-satisfied people." says Hugh Johnson.

Trees: Facts. Fantasies

PARIS (IHT) .- Trees, except of course for the dreadful stunted bonsal, suggest air and space. In modern cities they have become choked, gasping elements of decoration to cover man's mistakes, but everywhere they are more than ever the most satisfactory elements of dreams, souvenirs of times when all the world was young and all the trees were green, and the best place to imagine oneself with a jug of wine, a loaf of bread and whoever happens to be thou at that moment.

Only on the subject of trees can good sense and fantasy be so closely entwined. As the great rhododendron grower Lionel de Rothschild once began a lecture to a city gardening club, "Gentlemen, no garden, no matter how small, should be without its two acres of rough woodland." A book which combines fantasy and good sense with wonderfully evocative photographs and an intelligent text is "The International Book of Trees" (published by Mitchell Beazley, London, £9.95). Which has the added virtue of covering the

glassy expanse of most coffee

The text-full of charts_done with a care usually reserved for sex books these days—is by Hugh Johnson, who used to own a plane tree in London and now has several in Essex and has the further honor of living in the same village as the world's largest smooth-leafed ehn. Mr. Johnson also wrote the "World Atlas of Wines" and has two of the encyclopedist's essential qualities-enthusiasm and quirks enough to ripple the smooth flow of his erudition. Proof of Mr. Johnson's lack of rigidity comes on page 177 of his book (there are 288 pages including indexes), in a chapter on willows which bears a tiny color photo of the Chilean Maytenus which, as the caption explains, "is no relation of the willow (or any tree in this book), but this is the only place for it. " He detests classical French and Italian gardening "the vast formal gardens of France were conceived as settings for self-satisfied people in huge numbers. Trees were mere building materials"), and criticizes Capabality Brown for not using newly discovered species. He thinks yew always looks elderly, even senile, defines topiary as gardening with a sense of humor and thinks the weeping beech a monstrosity ("The ash and the elm both weep more convincingly. The beech's are surely crocodile tears"). He is soft on holly, especially Father Perny's holly, and he wishes Europe's little hedge (or field) maple came from Japan so people would fuss more over it. If he could have a tree outside his climate zone (the book is for readers in temperate regions), it would be an olive. In the beginning, some million years ago when there were no climate zones and nature was green in tooth and claw. "Asia, America and Europe alike had swamp cypresses, magnolia, sequoia, sweet gum. gingko, incense cedar, umbrella pine, as well as oak, beech and the other common trees we know," Mr. Johnson writes. Then came the ice age (in fact there were four ice ages.

with the names, rather like a

If the United Kingdom, especially Scotland, is the greatest tree collecting nation dukes of Atholi are hereditary larch nuts: the fourth duke planted 17 million of them), it is China that is the mother of gardens and the book is full of intrepid travelers' discoveries in the Orient, (Cuttings were often preserved in voyages across the world by having their ends stuck in a potato.) One of the most famous was Père David, the French missionary who, among other things, first reported the panda and the dove tree (Davidia). The most intrepid was Ernest Wilson, sent off to China by Veitch's nursery in England to collect the davidia. First he went to Yunnan to find an amateur botanist, Dr. Augustine Henry, who told him to travel another 900 miles to Ichang and gave him a map of sorts-it showed a solitary tree in an area the size of England. Wilson was boat-wrecked in the rapids. It was the time of the Boxer Rebellion and his guide was an onium addict. But finally he found the tree. Its stump was standing by a house that had just been built from Other incidental intelligence: the backberry is the Lotos of Tennyson's Lotos eaters. French walnut wood is used for English gun stocks, the California laurel is known as the Oregon myrtle in Oregon, and the parrotia is named after one Herr Parrot while the Judas tree is not named after whom you think but after its place of origin; in French it is

Swedish King Rumored PEOPLE: Engaged to German Girl

King Carl XVI Gostaf will announce his engagement to a We-t German commoner on his birthday, April 30, a Stockholm newspaper reported Friday. Expressen, quoting "informed court sources." said Carl Gustaf, 27, will marry Silvin Sommerlath, 25, whom he met when she was a hostess at the last Olympic Games. "We have no information about that," an official court spokesman said in response to a confirmation request. Swedish newspapers have reported that Miss Sommerlain spent part of the holiday season in Stockholm, staying with close friends of the king's and attending parties at the palace. * * * .

Queen Alia of Jordan has informally adopted a baby Jordanian giri who was orphaned by a Soviet plane crash. The Middle East Sketch an Englishlanguage weekly, described the adoption as "one of the closestkept secrets of the Jordanian royal court" and published photos of the queen with the 16-month-

Only the baby survived when a Soviet sirliner crashed into her family's home near Amman airport in June. Queen Alia, King Hussein's third wife, was quoted as saying that the little girlcalled Abeer (fragrance), lay in the wreckage for four hours. "It was a miracle she has survived." The queen is said to have called in specialists from abroad to treat the child. Abeer gradually recovered and the queen at first intended to put her in an orphanage. "But I can't put her away." she said. "I can't let anyone elle take her away from me now."

Teacher Bobby Waters of Penmare Park, England, wanted his car repainted and a friend recommended a local garage. "They're slow," he said, "but they're thorough." That was five years ago. Waters still hasn't got his car back. Tve called frequently at the garage owner's home." Waters said, "and he now calls me Bobby and invites me in for tea. But each time all he does is tell me that the car is nearly ready." Said garage owner Harold Thomas, "I am very painstaking. When I have finished that car will be the best-looking Wolseley 16/60 of its years in these parts."
